Why, despite increased awareness and dialogue, do you believe we often fall short of achieving substantial, lasting improvements in staff wellbeing across the sector, and perhaps within our own school contexts?

“The thing that is causing people to get ill at work and adversely affect their quality of working life is line managers who are not socially and interpersonally skilled. They don’t have the soft skills that are needed.”

Professor Sir Cary Cooper

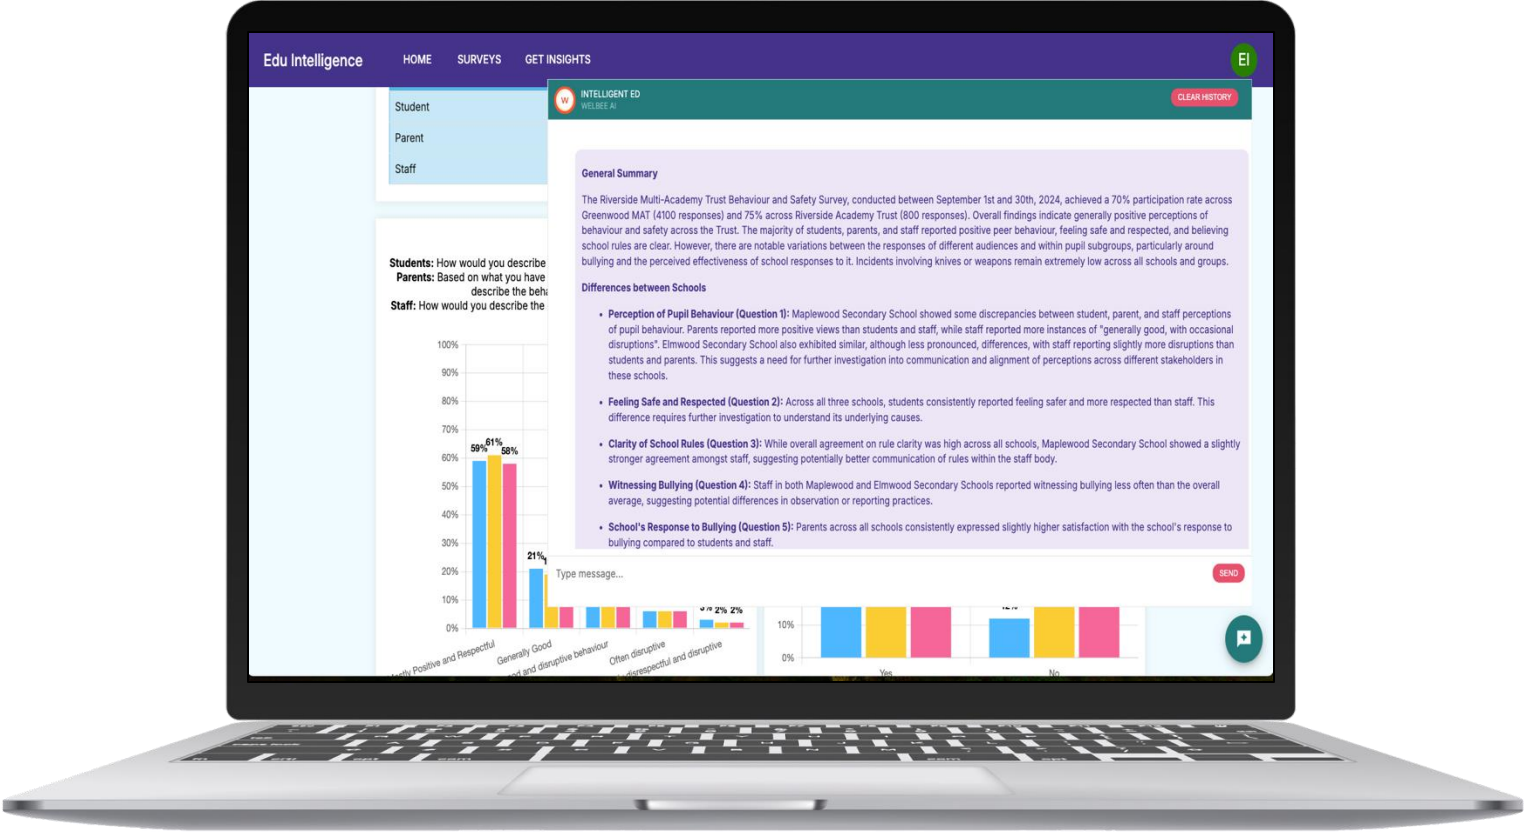

A photograph of a classroom scene, overlaid with a semi-transparent purple filter. In the foreground, the back of a child's head and shoulders are visible; they are wearing a blue and white striped shirt and have their right hand raised. To their right, another child in a red shirt also has their hand raised. In the background, a teacher or another adult is visible, smiling, with several other children in the class. The overall atmosphere is one of an active learning environment.

Using data to inform your decisions

What data do you currently collect and use to provide genuine insight into staff experience and their wellbeing at your school?

What don't you systematically collect but believe could be particularly helpful or crucial for understanding and improving staff wellbeing within your school's context?

Questions to ask

- ☐ What do you want to know?
- ☐ Why do you want to know this?
- ☐ What will you do once you have the data?

- ❑ Staff voice – e.g. wellbeing, engagement, workload (survey, focus groups, 1 to 1, stay & exit interviews)
- ❑ Student and parent voice – e.g. wellbeing, behaviour, attendance, SEND, quality of teaching and outcomes
